NATIONAL MARKET

NOVEMBER 2019

We bring you the latest trends in the UK's housing market, with a detailed focus on EX5 2.

House prices

At £234,370 property prices across the UK in September are just £3,000 (1.3%) higher than a year ago. Month on month, property prices remained static or fell marginally in all regions except the South East.

Economy

Base rates were held at 0.75% in November although two members of the committee voted for a decrease which is the first split vote since June 2018. The latest report has raised the possibility that rates could be cut in coming months if Brexit uncertainty persists.

Transactions

The HMRC report sales levels in October were 4.3% higher than a year ago, and at their highest monthly level since March 2017. However, in recent months sales volumes have been revised downwards in subsequent data revisions. Sales in September are now reported to be lower than a year ago.
